

WAVE OF CRIME IN NEW YORK

Police Busy Trying to Unravel Several Recent Bomb Plantings and Murders.

New York, Nov. 30.—Police of New York face a veritable wave of crime on the first swell of which, in the space of a few weeks, have come four bomb outrages, one street assassination that smacks of a Rosenthal murder, and a barrel murder mystery.

The first bomb outrage occurred several weeks ago when two men and a woman, thought to be members of a white slave band with ramifications that extend throughout the country, partially wrecked the new Bronx county courthouse and shattered the offices of the county sheriff.

The next one followed several days later when a bomb, the fuse sputtering dangerously near the explosive was discovered near a judge's bench in a city court in time to prevent damage and possible death to several persons. While the police still were without clue to these outrages two men dropped a barrel on a curb in Long Island City. It contained the still warm body of a man who had been shot through the heart.

Then came the wrecking of the first floor of a tenement in Cherry Street. Investigation by the police uncovered the fact that the place had been occupied by a Sicilian club.

In one of the rooms was found enough explosives to have blown the six-story tenement to bits. Two inured men and a third, who was aiding them, were arrested in one of the wrecked rooms.

Within a day after the wrecking of the Cherry Street bomb plant Barn Raff, whose fight against the poultry trust resulted in the conviction and sentencing to jail of thirteen of its members, was lured from his office and shot to death in crowded street. His two murderers escaped in an automobile.

The last bomb explosion occurred late Thursday. A man who said his name is Tony Lollo was carrying a bundle along East One Hundred and Fourteenth Street. Suddenly the "bundle" exploded, ripping away two of Lollo's fingers. It was a dynamite bomb.

The police are certain he can be connected in some way with New York's bomb planters.

YOUTH BEATEN TO DEATH

Called From Church Social by Two Comrades—Brass Knuckles Used By Assaultants.

Huntington, W. Va., Nov. 30.—During a church social at Polkadot, Ohio, near this city yesterday Lawrence Watson, 17 years old, was called from the church and beaten to death by two comrades, who, the authorities say, are Bray Dillon and Ezra Knight, of Millersport, Ohio. Both boys are under arrest.

The youths, apparently the best of friends, had gone to the social together, accompanied by some girl friends. A quarrel occurred, Knight and Dillon leaving. Later they are said to have used the name of a girl as a pretext to lure Watson from the building. They are alleged to have attacked Watson using steel knuckles. His cries brought a hundred persons from the church, but his skull had been crushed in several places when they reached the scene. The assaultants fled, but were captured late last night.

Watson is the son of Scott Watson, a farmer of eastern Lawrence county. The other boys are members of prominent families.
